Free building industry event in Geraldton

Building industry participants in WA's Mid West and beyond are invited to a free information seminar in Geraldton presented by the State Government's building regulator.

Topics at the Building and Energy event on Friday 27 October include determination of wind classifications and roof tie downs, with examples from Severe Tropical Cyclone Ilsa, and residential timber framing audit findings.

There will also be an update on the National Construction Code's (NCC) 2022 edition and guidance on performance solutions, evidence of suitability and complying with energy efficiency requirements, as well as processing building permits.

Building and Energy Executive Director Saj Abdoolakhan said the roadshow would be of interest to all participants in the building and construction sector, including builders, building surveyors, architects, designers and staff in local government building sections.

"As a regulator, one of our key functions is to educate and empower the industries we regulate," Mr Abdoolakhan said.

"This is an important opportunity to learn about significant issues for the industry. Participants will also be able to share information and ask questions about particular areas of interest."

The free event is at the City of Greater Geraldton building on Friday 27 October from 9am to 3pm. A light lunch will be provided.

Registration is essential via Building and Energy's Eventbrite listing or the "events and seminars" link at commerce.wa.gov.au/building-and-energy/stay-informed.

Hotel hackers: scam alert for holidaymakers

If you're looking forward to a dream holiday, then watch out for a sophisticated new scam that could risk it turning into a nightmare.

Consumer Protection's WA ScamNet team is warning travellers about unexpected messages from their accommodation providers seeking additional credit card verification, as it could be the work of scammers who have hacked into the hotel's computer system.

This two-pronged scam begins with the scammer targeting a hotel by posing as a genuine customer who needs help with downloading some 'important' information regarding an upcoming stay. They might claim to suffer from allergies to cleaning products and need the hotel to cross-reference the substances used, or they could ask for a map they've created to be printed off for their technology-challenged parents.

Whatever the excuse, the endgame is the same – once the hotel employee downloads the malware-infected documents, the scammer will have full access to their sensitive information, including login credentials, financial details and contact information for their other customers.

That's when the scammer ups the ante by sending a convincing message to the hotel's future guests asking for additional credit card verification as soon as possible via a fake booking link.

With the message originating from within the hotel's own booking system – and it being about a genuine upcoming trip – WA ScamNet is concerned that even the most scam-savvy consumers could be more inclined to hand over their credit card details than they otherwise would.

While this is a very sophisticated scam, consumers can beat the scammers by following WA Scamnet's usual advice to protect against malware and phishing. This includes to avoid clicking on unexpected or unsolicited links, even from trusted businesses. Instead, contact the company directly at an official email address or phone number to confirm the veracity of the message. Do not rely on contact details in an unexpected message.

Be suspicious of messages encouraging you to act quickly and never enter personal or banking details into any website unless you are certain it is genuine and you have checked the URL carefully for indicators of deception.

If you have provided your financial information through a suspicious link or in response to an unexpected message, contact your financial institution immediately and follow their guidance on securing your finances.

To report a scam or get further assistance, contact WA ScamNet by making an online report at www.scamnet.wa.gov.au or call 1300 30 40 54.
