Three Springs Aquatic Centre

Thankyou

Dear Shire

I wish to commend the pool on the way the opening hours have been adapted to suit the heat this summer. A lot of workers find it difficult to make the 6oclock closing and have been enjoying the later hours. I'm happy to see people, particularly children, discouraged from being exposed to the extreme UV rays from Midday.

THANKYOU

Three Springs Short Stay Eco Park

Good morning,

We stayed at Three Springs campground last night with our 2 kids.

The area was perfectly maintained, clean and level with clean amenities close by, the shower was appreciated! We enjoyed playing some basketball with the kids and zooming around the skate park on the scooters.

We also visited the town pool, the pool amenities were absolutely spotless and we could tell how much thought and consideration has gone in to creating such a fun and welcoming space. The Manager was constantly working to tidy things up, make sure people had what they needed and were safe. Such a great place to meet and we were so looked after.

We wanted to let you know how much a place like yours impacts travelling families like ours and how much we appreciated the campsite, wonderful pool and people.

Thanks again,

Keden and Ash

Beware the trap – work from home scams flooding social media

New year, new job! But watch-out for job scams that hope to steal your money, rather than make you any.

Social media or encrypted message platforms like WhatsApp or Telegram are currently flooded with job scams, offering easy employment online with no experience needed and the added benefit of working from home.

The phony jobs require people to perform tasks for a commission, such as leaving fake “five star” reviews on food delivery services apps and online shopping platforms, or liking and following social media accounts. Some people are asked to purchase products before leaving a false review, so they appear as a “verified buyer” on the platform.

Victims often have to send evidence of their “work” to an “auditor” (i.e. scammer), and they are led to believe they are helping a business’ profile with their fake positive reviews. But it’s got nothing to do with the reviews, it’s about scamming you out of your hard-earned money. Scammers will request money through bank transfer or crypto currency to cover taxes, keep your account active or to cover conversion rates when paying out your “earnings”.

To secure the job, victims are deceived into investing a substantial amount of money with the false promise of high returns. They will be encouraged to create an account where they are often asked to provide forms of identification as well. Once the person realises there won’t be any payment or promised return, the scammers then begin a harassment campaign for further payments.

One person reported losing nearly $2,000 to a job scam where she was assigned tasks to rate products online. After setting up a cryptocurrency account, she initially earned $400 and felt positive about the new job. She was then asked to deposit her own money into the account to continue receiving tasks and was also added to a group chat with scammers posing as other excited employees encouraging the newcomers to invest in this “wonderful opportunity.”

Sadly, these job scams generally target new parents, retirees, international students and people living with disability. However, anyone could become caught in a scammer’s web.

WA ScamNet has already received several reports of these scams this year. The victims have lost almost $60,000 in total.

Keep an eye out for the red flags and practice the pause – take a moment to consider if the job is too good to be true. Scammers are highly sophisticated and may post ads on legitimate job websites or on social media to appear as genuine businesses. Be alert to any vague job descriptions and communications conducted through social media and message platforms.

Verify company information through your own internet searches and be suspicious if there is no physical address.

Beware of job offers made without a formal interview and never provide payment upfront, especially by cryptocurrency. It’s unlikely you’ll ever get your money back and you should never have to pay a fee to secure employment.

If you think you have fallen prey to a job scam, cease and block all contact with the scammers, contact your bank and report the scam to ScamNet – scamnet.wa.gov.au or call 1300 30 40 54.

Also be on high alert for follow up scams where fraudsters contact you again claiming to be a fund recovery agency able to help retrieve the lost money. This is also a scam and should be ignored.

What's Up in the Night Sky?

Venus is Brilliant

After the sun sets on February evenings, Venus will make a striking sight setting on the western horizon. On 16th February, Venus is at what is known as “greatest brilliance” and is the brightest it gets for the year.

Through a telescope, Venus will appear as a crescent shape. From our position on Earth, Venus has phases just like our Moon. This is because Venus is inside Earth’s orbit, so when it is closest to Earth, we can only see part of the surface of the planet that is illuminated by the Sun’s light.

When and where to look: From 7pm right through the month of February in the west. Greatest brilliance is on 16th February.

On 16th February, Venus will be at its greatest brilliance. Image provided by SkySafari, a Simulation Curriculum Company, All rights reserved www.simulationcurriculum.com.

Rural Aid

January article Rural Aid 2025

Happy New Year everyone. 2025 a new year with new plans and new projects. Some may have made a new year's resolution. This usually would have entailed doing something to be a better self. This may be to do with being more proactive in the community, visiting friends or improving yourself. What is important here is that we recognise we feel we could live our lives with a difference, more aligned with who we feel we really are.

Sometimes the resolution or the part of our lives we want to improve on can be very daunting. The goal set requires a big effort. It may be the same resolution that we have made for years but we're going to give it another go. How we view this is important. Our mind may give us reason and thoughts of why we can't do this. Be curious, these doubts are trying to be helpful in their own way. Doubts can be used to remind us that we do need to be 'actually doing' to begin to achieve what we want to change. We may need to alter or change some old habits. Past guilt can serve us because we have learnt not what to do from now on.

You are at the bottom of a mountain and the goal you want to achieve is at the top. If we try to reach our goal by taking one huge leap we will probably fail. But what if we identify what we need to do to get to that first rest point? I can see at least 5 other rest points or stages from here, there maybe more, but right now I'm going to concentrate on getting to the first point on my journey to the top. Approaching what we want to achieve one stage at a time can result in our final goal becoming achievable. For example, I intend to exercise more and lose weight. Right, I'll go for a 10km walk every day, fairly daunting probably resulting in failure. Or, step 1 I will go for a walk this Wednesday at 5pm, no planned distance, no over thinking where, I'll walk out of my gate and go for a walk. Achievable step 1 done, and I feel really good about myself. (yes my personal resolution)

By achieving we enhance our ability to be more positive. But we also need to be flexible and not so hard on ourselves when what we planned isn't quite on track. 'Ok step 3, joining the walking club in three months hasn't happened; no biggie; I'm aware of this and I'm walking 6kms a day now so I'm closer than I was three months ago and I have already achieved the first two stages. Winning.

The ability to step back, pause and look at ourselves and question our resulting emotions with curiosity is helpful. We are all individual and we are the experts on ourselves. Some may have certain expectations of themselves and become negative when not achieving what they feel they need to. But knowing and accepting this personal lifetime trait results in an ability to challenge or be curious about the resulting emotions. We have the freedom to choose to react differently. We can help ourselves to be more positive using personal reflection about what our thoughts are trying to tell us. Ie: I'm annoyed, why, oh its because I felt I should have joined that walking club by now and I've never not liked not sticking to a plan. But hey I will get there.

But sometimes thoughts and feelings can become too strong and begin to be our reality. In these times you are still the expert on yourself and know you are not yourself. Choose to seek help, call and talk to a friend or partner, call me, talking through your emotions can be powerful enough to put you back on the tracks facing the right direction. If we are facing in the right direction all we have to do is keep on walking.

FEDERAL MEMBER FOR DURACK

Stronger Communities Programme Round 9 Expressions of Interest Now Open

17 January 2025

Expressions of Interest (EOI) are now open for Round 9 of the Stronger Communities Programme (SCP). This vital funding round is back, offering $150,000 to each electorate to support grassroots community infrastructure.

Labor stopped this essential program in 2023, marking one of many regional funding cutbacks. However, due in part to the ongoing advocacy from the Federal Member for Durack, Melissa Price MP and the WA regional Liberal team, this important regional funding opportunity has returned.

The SCP delivers tangible benefits to communities by:

- Supporting and encouraging participation in local projects.
- Enhancing community engagement and involvement.
- Fostering vibrant, thriving, and sustainable communities.

Grants ranging from $2,500 to $20,000 are available to cover up to 100% of eligible project costs for organisations or 50% for local governing bodies. This funding supports local jobs, grows economies, and delivers lasting infrastructure and much-needed equipment.

The Hon Melissa Price MP said that the return of this funding for Durack will help deliver the infrastructure and equipment that contribute to vibrant and sustainable communities. "I have seen some incredible results in Durack from this funding program and I am excited to see more projects come to life through this round. Due to Labor slashing vital regional funding, our local not-for-profits and shires have been waiting for this announcement for quite some time. I strongly encourage interested organisations to visit my website or contact my office to discuss projects that matter to them and our communities."

Ms Price also highlighted the critical importance of ongoing regional funding for communities in Durack. "Regional funding like this ensures our remote and regional communities have access to the resources they need to grow and thrive. These grants make a real difference by supporting the projects and infrastructure that keep our communities strong."

Expressions of Interest close 5pm, Friday 7 February 2025. To access the EOI and program guidelines, visit <https://www.melissapricemp.com.au/grants> and for more information on eligibility criteria and how to apply, visit business.gov.au.

Ends.
