The WA Government caretaker period

News story

The WA Government has assumed a caretaker role in advance of the State General Election on 8 March 2025. Find out what this means.

What is the caretaker period?

By convention, the Government assumes a 'caretaker' role in the period immediately before a State General Election as it is recognised that every general election carries the possibility of a change of government.

The caretaker period commences from the date of the issue of the writs and continues until the election result is clear or until the new Government is sworn in.

What happens during the caretaker period

During the caretaker period, efforts are made to ensure that decisions are not taken that would bind an incoming government and/or limit its freedom of action. The practices associated with the caretaker role are also directed at protecting the apolitical role of the public sector.

The Caretaker Conventions provide guidance for the handling of business during the caretaker period.

WA State Election

The WA State Election will be held on Saturday 8 March 2025.

Voting is an important part of Western Australia's democratic system and gives the community an opportunity to have their say.

Visit the WA Electoral Commission(link is external) website for information on:

- How to enroll to vote.
- Finding out if you're eligible to vote.
- Updating your address.
- Where to find your nearest polling location.

Where to find critical information

During the caretaker period, you can still access all government services and information through the usual websites.

REGIONAL COLUMN

With Senior Regional Officer for Midwest – Natasha Pirrottina

Dodgy deals done dirt cheap: the dark side of bargain car sales

Dodgy unlicensed car dealers are a blight on the community. They often put consumers and road users at risk by selling cars riddled with problems. Not only can they target Perth metro consumers, but they could also show up in regional towns and communities with their truck load of danger, looking to take advantage of vulnerable people such as low income earners, older Australians and the Aboriginal community.

If someone sells or exchanges four or more vehicles in any 12-month period to or with people that are not car dealers, they're carrying on a motor vehicle dealing business and need to be licensed.

Along with selling cars that are often unroadworthy, these unlicensed motor vehicle dealers don't offer warranties that are required by law on their second-hand vehicles. This means if you have mechanical issues after your purchase from these illegal operators, you won't be protected in the same way you would if you had purchased from a licensed car dealer.

Illegal traders generally do not repair any faults in a car once sold, leaving you out-of-pocket and possibly stuck with a lemon.

Consumer Protection is aware of situations in regional areas where cars sold by dodgy dealers only make it a few hundred kilometres down the road before they breakdown. The unknown cost to repair your vehicle is the risk you take by purchasing from an unlicensed dealer.

Also be wary of cars for sale on a verge or block of vacant land. There are cases of cars being sold in this way by unlicensed motor vehicle dealers.

You can protect yourself by doing a simple check. Before buying a car, check that the seller is licensed by asking to see their Motor Vehicle Dealer's Licence. You can also cross check online via the Online Licence Search – ols.dmirs.wa.gov.au.

Another risky vehicle purchase can be a repairable write-off. Back in June last year, it became compulsory for car dealers to tell potential buyers whether a vehicle under 15 years old is a repairable write-off. Previously to this, a car dealer only had to tell you if you asked.

Unfortunately, inspections have revealed some dealers are not complying with repairable write-off rules. Look for the sign in the windscreen that shows whether the car was a write-off or not and continue to ask questions about the history of the vehicle you're looking to buy. And keep in mind, these rules do not apply to private car sales.

No matter whether you're buying privately or through a dealer, you should always inspect the log book, compare the condition of the car with how many kilometres the odometer reads and if possible arrange for an independent qualified mechanic to check over the vehicle.

A $2 search of the Personal Properties Securities Register (PPSR) will also reveal if a vehicle under 15 years old is a repairable write-off, has been stolen and is free of outstanding debts.

To further protect consumers, there is also Consumer Protection's easy-to-follow used car buyer's checklist. (<https://www.consumerprotection.wa.gov.au/publications/buying-car-buyers-checklist>).

Help protect yourself and others on the road by letting Consumer Protection know about unlicensed car dealers - call 1300 30 40 54 or consumer@dmirs.wa.gov.au.

Rural Aid

With recent cyclone, floods and fires I felt it appropriate to write about what may happen to us when we experience or a subject to a natural disaster or an incident that causes high stress. trauma and a reaction in ourselves.

The first and most important factor is that as unique individuals we will react and do what we need to do in our own way and that no way is wrong. Some may move through the event with little personal stress, some may find that they just can't move and feel numb. Some may be affected immediately after the event, some may be triggered later in a few weeks, months or years. How we react can be shaped by our past experiences, the level of support we have, the connection to others and community we have established and the actual nature of the event itself.

Reactions can be similar to when we experience grief and loss. Grief and loss reactions are not only when someone close passes away. Our subsequent varying emotions that may include anger, guilt, dismay, blaming of self and others and disbelief. These reactionary emotions do not come in a set order or pattern. Greif and loss reactions also occur when we lose something such as property, stock, a relationship and or our physical health.

Common responses we may have can be, being forgetful, feel isolated, feel anxious and or depressed, Denial, Guilt (why them not me), feeling out of control, have nightmares and flashbacks, become detached. Physical symptoms may include Nausea, dizziness, have trouble sleeping, lose appetite, headaches, being easily startled or triggered and more. Long term responses maybe emotional detachment, substance abuse to better cope, problems with work, school and relationship issues, PTSD, and fears of the event recurring. Similar weather, smells, media stories and places may trigger a stronger response than usual.

The good news is that you are not going crazy. Your mind and body is doing its best to ensure you are safe, protecting you from any perceived harm. It means well.

Do your best to get back what routine you can, this maybe eating at the usual time each day, going to bed at the same time as you usually do, attending those events with friends, clubs or groups that you are a part of. Control what you are able to. I can't remember much but I can carry and make a note on a notebook or on my phone. Utilise grounding techniques such as slow breathing. If your body is saying you're tired allow yourself to rest.

But most importantly seek support and give support. Though challenging, listening to others without judgement and talking through what you are feeling is vey powerful and can also help release some frustration and strong reactionary emotions. Call me or another counsellor, who doesn't matter who, but make sure you ask for help.

Hello Autumn!

The March or Autumn equinox marks the transition from summer to autumn in the southern hemisphere. It also marks several astronomical phenomena. The Sun rises directly in the east and sets due west. The Sun will also appear exactly halfway between its northernmost and southernmost location in the sky.

The exact time of the March equinox occurs when the sun is directly above the Earth's equator. This year, this occurs on 20th March at 5.01pm for West Australians. The image below shows how seasons progress as Earth orbits the Sun.

For more what's up in the night sky, visit www.astrotourismwa.com.au. Happy stargazing!

While the Mid West region is distinct, consultation highlighted that many regions face shared challenges and opportunities that need to be addressed to achieve the Strategy's vision. As such, the majority of the Strategy's 93 recommendations apply to the Mid West and other regions. It is expected that the unique circumstances of each region are taken into account when implementing recommendations.

TSHC is seeking a co-ordinator/coach for Minkey team for the upcoming season. The main role involves co-ordinating our eager children aged 4-10 years for their hockey game each Saturday during the winter sports season.

This usually includes a 15-minute warm up and then a 30minute game. You would be supported by a TSHC umpire who can officiate the home games, the coach/co-ordinator role is to help manage the children whilst other senior sport/canteen commitments are happening.

If you are interested in helping or would like more information please contact Club President Tamara on 0429 05 1428 or Secretary Bec on 0408147919 or email the club at threespringshockeyclub@gmail.com
